

SCUBAPRO JET SPORT ADJUSTABLE | SRP: £69

Scubapro have a great reputation for making top-quality dive kit, and the Jet Sports continue this tradition. They blend the vent design from the more-expensive Twin Jet Max with a broad paddle section.

According to Scubapro, the blade is a tri-material design featuring a pair of soft rubber panels framed in semi-stiff plastic and flanked by thin side rails, producing just the right amount of flex.

There are also drag-reducing vents between the blade and the foot pocket to decrease resistance on both up and down strokes.

The Jet Sport is equipped with a traditional rubber adjustable heel strap, with pinch-release buckles.

The Scubapro Jet Sport Adjustable fins are pretty big units, sitting comfortably between its rivals in terms of size and weight. The foot pocket is very comfortable, and the non-slip bottom works well. I would trade the rubber heel straps in for a set of retro-fit spring straps, which would make things a lot easier when it comes to getting them on and off.

The design - combining a blade with vents - works well, and generates great power in a normal and frog kick, and is not bad in a back kick either. Like the Aqualungs, strong leg muscles help get the best out of them, but overall, these are a solid performer at a decent price.

SCUBA DIVER VERDICT

Robust, well-made fins with plenty of thrust, and all at a decent price. They are good-looking to boot.
